THOR SURVIVORS AFTER HARROWING FIGHT MAKE PORT

Rescued Saturday morning while they were trying to make a precarious landing at Kahuku, the balance of the survivors of the wrecked steamer Thor reached Honolulu late Saturday afternoon after two weeks of strenuous experiences in which they traveled over 700 miles in a small lifeboat.

Early Saturday morning the Thor survivors sighted land off the Kahuku coast. Heading for the shore, they were in grave danger of being swamped by high seas, when the Japanese sampan crew of the Tinjin Maru discerned their distress and went to their aid.

The sampan crew managed to get alongside of the little lifeboat and take off the 15 survivors, all of whom were weakened by the exposure of 14 days, in which they had little to eat, only a small portion of water daily and scarcely no sleep.

The Thor foundered over two weeks ago, about 700 miles north and 80 miles west of Honolulu. Two or three days later one boatload of survivors was picked up 150 miles south of the wreck by an unnamed vessel.

The Thor is reported to have been overloaded when she left San Francisco. With such a heavy cargo she was unable to withstand the storm which swept the Pacific on the variable wind course to the northward, and her crew was forced to abandon her just before she sank.

After a shave, bath, change of clothing and plenty of good food the Thor survivors are today little the worse for their experiences, except for their swollen feet.

Included in the shipwrecked mariners brought to Honolulu are Mate Rolf Anderson, Albert Nelson, freight clerk; the chief engineer, third engineer, four seamen, five firemen, one cook and the mess boy, a youth of only 16 years of age.

The freight clerk is a member of the naval reserve of the United States and will report to the naval authorities at Pearl Harbor.

ILL-STARRED JOKER SENDS AMBULANCE OUT ON THREE FAKE CALLS

Some one who, boasts, a warped sense of humor is making merry at the expense of the emergency hospital staff. Three times since Saturday has the ambulance been called out on fake runs by the individual who seems to regard it great sport to have the ambulance drive three miles on a hurry-call only to find no accident victim at the end of the trip. Saturday night the ambulance was called to Moanalua by telephone report that an auto had tipped over and a man was pinned under it. There was no sign of an accident when Moanalua was reached. Sunday morning at 1:30 a similar call came in for the ambulance to hurry to Diamond Head lighthouse. There was also reported an auto accident in which a man was pinned beneath it.

Again this morning about 7:30 the ambulance sped to the Moana hotel to rescue a supposed drowning man. It turned out to be a fake.

If the so-called joker does not cease his pranks the hospital staff may have to lose what in some instances may prove precious minutes in investigating emergency calls before responding. The hospital staff accepts emergency calls in good faith.

LOSS OF MATSON BOATS HITS BANANA GROWERS

Withdrawal of the three Matson steamers for government use will work a great hardship and financial loss on the banana growers of the islands. It is asserted even if the steamers are used only for a short time for government business.

If the Matson, President and Hyades are held for only a month the loss to the banana growers will be as much as $15,000, it is estimated. Few if any bananas can be shipped to the coast by other steamers than the Matson ones, as there is always little cargo space on the Oceanic and Pacific Mail liners.

PASSENGERS EXPECTED

By the Matson steamer from San Francisco:

Four days' extension of time has been allowed by the army for applications to be sent in for the second officers' training camp. The time was to have expired on Saturday, but some reports were yet lacking from national guard organizations on that date. A total of 23 men from the national guard are allowed on the camp roll, but it is thought that the number will be about 30.

WEEKLY PRODUCE REPORT

By A. T. LONGLEY, Marketing Superintendent.
ISSUED BY THE TERRITORIAL MARKETING DIVISION
FOR WEEK ENDING NOV. 30.

There has been very few changes in the market prices during the week. Large island corn has advanced $2 per ton and there is very little island corn for sale, as most of the Hawaii and Maui crops have been sold.

Large quantities of Maui beans have been received and are not selling very fast. We have made a trial shipment to the coast. I do not think it will be necessary to make more shipments to the coast, as the grocers of Honolulu have promised to push the island beans, and we hope that all the house-

URGES CELERY GROWING HERE

Just as fine celery may be grown in Hawaii as is grown anywhere in the United States, according to Mrs. James Russell, who grew her own celery for years before she quit gardening to take charge of the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria.

"Even if I did not know from personal experience that celery may be grown successfully on any of the islands I should know it from the Chinese vegetable gardens," said Mrs. Russell. "Celery will grow wherever good, damp, firm soil can be had. The green celery for sale on all Honolulu vegetable wagons is island grown. All that it needs to perfect it for table use is proper treatment while it is growing. It must be bleached."

"No celery is naturally white," said Mrs. Russell. "To give it the beautiful white looked for in the best celery, as well as to bring out its crisp, nutty, celery flavor, it must be bleached. Nobody has ever tried to teach the Oriental gardener how to bleach his celery, and because of that most island celery is good only for the soup pot."

"The process of bleaching is very simple. It must be begun when the plants are young. For example, I shall take a bed of celery from the time it is sown, in drills, in damp, rich soil, until it has reached the thinning stage. All weekly stalks are pulled out and added to the daily soup. The vigorous, healthy stalks left are banded high with the rich earth, in which sometimes hay or grass may be mixed. The embankment around the celery must be kept moist at all times, and there should not be too much sun on the plants. To make the bedding of the stalks easier the drills in which they are grown may be at the bottom of a trench one or two feet deep. With plenty of water and some shade there's hardly a spot on the islands where celery would not grow. Mrs. George C. Watt of Kohala, Hawaii, who has beautiful white celery nearly all the year around for her table, grows and bleaches it all herself.

"And that's another thing," added Mrs. Russell. "Island people need not limit their use of celery to autumn and winter, if they work up home production of this very appetizing food. It can be planted so there will be a new crop coming in all the time. Celery is grown, bleached and ready for the table four months after it is planted in the Hawaiian islands."

The American Red Cross sent to Italy a message that a permanent Red Cross mission was going over there.
